Main body of handwritten text, consisting of approximately 10 lines of script. The text is written in a cursive style and appears to be a continuous passage. The right edge of the page is heavily damaged and torn.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written on a single line across the page, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect. The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and the age of the document. The text appears to be a continuous passage, possibly a letter or a record, written in a historical context.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Persian or Urdu, spanning multiple lines across a narrow strip of paper. The text is densely packed and appears to be a continuous passage. The script is highly stylized and fluid, characteristic of historical manuscript writing. The paper is aged and shows signs of wear, including small dark spots and a slightly irregular edge on the left side.

Handwritten Burmese text on aged paper, featuring two large circular holes. The text is arranged in several lines, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect. The paper is yellowed and shows signs of wear.

Handwritten text in a script, likely Burmese, arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The text is written on aged, yellowish paper with some visible wear and tear at the bottom edge. The script is dense and cursive, with many characters that appear to be variations of a single set of symbols, possibly representing a specific dialect or a highly stylized form of the language. The lines are roughly parallel, with some slight indentations at the beginning of certain lines, suggesting a structured format like a list or a series of entries. The overall appearance is that of a historical manuscript or a collection of notes.

Some of the most interesting papers which I have seen in the collection of the Library of the University of Cambridge are the MSS. of the Journal of the Rev. John Henry Newman written at the time of his residence in the University of Oxford. The MSS. are in the handwriting of Newman and are of great value. They contain a great deal of information about the history of the University of Oxford and the life of Newman. The MSS. are in the possession of the University of Cambridge and are open to the inspection of all who are interested in the history of the University of Oxford and the life of Newman.
